Next Tuesday will be the last of the spring elections when the village elections are held in incorporated villages. In Mokena there is a lively contest on with three tickets in the field. Offices to be filled are President Board of Trustees, three village trustees and a police magistrate.

Three independent tickets are on the ballot. The out going mayor and three trustees as well as the police magistrate are seeking re-election and also the village clerk. Those seeking re-election are: Mayor, Harry F. Mall; village clerk, Everett J. Cooper; village trustees: Willard Martie, Albert Braun and Harold Spiess; police magistrate, Albert Hentsch.

On independent ticket No. 2 the candidates are: For Mayor, Paul J. Roosen; village trustees, John Marti, T. Arthur Shoop, Carl Wolter.

On independent ticket No. 3 there are only two candidates, Rene Guindon for village trustee and Frank Schrage for police magistrate.

The village election in Frankfort will be the same this year. There is only one ticket.

The present incumbents whose term of office expires are up for re-election. They are: for president, George C. Sangmeister; for village clerk, Walter Pfaff; for village trustees, Conrad J. Oetter, Henry G. Breidert, Alfred R. Zechlin; for police magistrate, J. C. Knight.

In Orland Park two tickets are creating much interest in a hot campaign. The present mayor Wm. Koffman and Mrs. H. Adele Cooper, village clerk, are not candidates. They have held their respective offices for many years and have made excellent records.

Two full tickets commanding the voters attention right now are:

People's Ticket: for president of board of trustees, Stewart M. Loebe; for village clerk, Ralph L. Town for village trustees, Howard W. Hewson, Charles H. Cooper, A. C. Kay; for police magistrate, Carl R. Quigley.

The Citizens Ticket is headed by Walter R. Schussler, Jr., for president board of trustees; for village clerk, Joseph L. Rust; for village trustees: L. A. Cleveland, E. J. Oranger C. E. Nicolai; for police magistrate, Wm. J. Murphy.

In Tinley Park C. A. Niemann who has served the village for a long time as village clerk, has decided to run for Mayor to succeed Francis A. Harper who is retiring from the local political field after a long and useful political career.

The main contest will be for the village trustee jobs. The candidates for these offices, three of whom are to be elected are: Wesley J. Stemm, True E. Daniels, Frank Mancke, Clarence J. Fulton, Harry M. Uthe. For police magistrate there will be a write in proposition.

Wm. Firchau is also uncontested for village clerk.

All these village elections will be held next Tuesday, April 15, the polls opening at 6 a. m., and closing at 5 p. m.

At Frankfort Ernest Pfeifer is the outgoing director and as he is moving from Frankfort he is not in the race. No candidate has been named in his place.

In Orland township there is no contest either. Ralph Town is the outgoing director and is a candidate for re-election. He has no opposition.

In New Lenox the Board of Education will elect a president for a one year term and two members of the board for a three year term. The candidates are: President, Walter H. Baers; for members, H. C. Senning and L. J. Boynton.

Seek To Inform Taxpayers of Local Assessments

Bringing complete tax assessment information directly and regularly before the individual taxpayer of the community is the purpose of a bill now before the Illinois senate (Senate Bill No. 117) introduced by Arthur J. Bidwill of the 7th senatorial district.

Should this measure become law, the tax assessment rolls, both real and personal, would henceforth be published at regular intervals in local Cook County newspapers of general circulation, thus permitting the tax payer to study his assessment in comparison with assessments, indicated generally in his neighborhood, and affording ample time to file objections with the Board of Appeals in the event inequalities are discovered.

Local taxing bodies also foresee distinct advantages in the proposed bill, it is stated. Publication of assessments should, they feel—have the salutary effect of materially improving tax collections by reducing tax delinquency in Cook County.

Officials of these taxing bodies direct attention to the fact that delinquencies in counties other than Cook are exceedingly small as compared with Cook County. In these counties it has long since been the accepted practice to publish assessment rolls in local papers.

Bill 117 provides that the County Assessor shall publish all real estate and personal property assessments levied in Cook County outside of Chicago, in a newspaper of general circulation published within the township where such assessments are levied.

While present statute makes provision for such publication, it also provides that in counties of more than 500,000 population they may be made in pamphlet form instead of in newspapers. For several years this has been done with reasonable regularity as to personal property assessments but for at least eight years there has been none on real estate assessments.

Publication of these assessments is provided for in the County budget and it is proposed, would be done as each levy is made. Newspapers, being the accepted medium for keeping the local community informed on vital public affairs, are indicated as the logical mediums for such publication.

He Was In And Now He Is Out

When the official canvass of the returns of the Bremen Township election held last Tuesday was made last Saturday, it was discovered that Walter Mancke of Tinley Park who had been declared tax collector of Bremen township by a margin of 5 votes over his opponent Wm. Fleischauer of Oak Forest, was in reality defeated and the canvass showed Fleischauer to be the victor by 5 votes. The upset was due to an error in the Cloverdale precinct in Robbins. This precinct had reported 152 votes for Fleischauer and 162 votes for Mancke. According to reports the tally sheets show erasures and re-writing of names and figures.

It is reported that Mr. Mancke is going to ask for a recount of the ballots cast in this precinct for tax collector.

In the event of a recount the matter will go before Judge Edmund Jarecki.

Mr. Fleischauer had also threatened to ask for a recount when the election returns had at first shown him as being the loser.

The outcome of this controversy is being watched with much interest.

U. S. Develops Great Generals In Every War

Gen. Marshall Heads Army As Nation Watches World Conflict.

By ROGER SHAW

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WASHINGTON. — Every American war, or war in which America was interested, has turned out a general, or two, or three. In the Revolution there were George Washington and Nathaniel Greene, of first rank. Strangely enough, the general who won that war's primary victory, Saratoga, was not of first rank by any manner of means. His name, still unpopular in army circles, was Horatio Gates. Gates disliked Washington, and the "Gates" triumph over Burgoyne was really won by such subordinates as Benedict Arnold and Dan Morgan.

The War of 1812 was perhaps the American army's most dismal episode. It turned out traitors, poltroons and phonies. But it also produced bucolic Gen. Andrew Jackson, of the same tough Scotch Irish stock as Dan Morgan's riflemen. Jackson won the concluding battle of New Orleans, after his countrymen had met defeat at Detroit, Queenstown, and up and down the long Canadian border.

In the Mexican war there were two of them: Zach Taylor and Winfield Scott. Scott was "old fuss and feathers" to the boys in blue. Taylor was a political general from the slave-South, while Scott was a regular. Both men were amiable and efficient, especially Scott, who had learned his tricks as a youngster back in 1812. The exploits of this twain, with tiny forces far from home, were almost epic.

In the Civil war we have a double set-up: North and South. The northern all-stars were the usual big three of Grant-Sherman-Sheridan, the latter originally a cavalry chief. Sherman was the best of the three, and the best in the whole war, according to the world's leading military critic, B. H. Liddell Hart of England. The southern team was Lee-Jackson-Forrest. Stonewall Jackson was killed in mid-war.

Five Generals Became President. In the Spanish war there were generals and admirals and what-nots, but a lieutenant-colonel named Teddy Roosevelt ran away with the show. He commanded the rough riders at San Juan Hill, and rode himself into the White House, in good company. The company was as follows: Washington, Jackson, Taylor and Grant—a general from each war, who became President.

That brings us down to the so-called second World war. In this war there have been very few generals of note. England's Gort and Ironside were kicked upstairs after Dunkirk. France's Gamelin, a nice fellow like Gort, is more than in the doghouse. Generals Petain and Weygand, in this man's war, are political generals rather than front-fighters. Finland's Mannerheim and Greece's dead Metaxas were dictator-generals who combined business with pleasure, when it came to their particular Russian and Italian phases of Armageddon II. Germany's air chief, Hermann Goering, is a purely political general, while Keitel is a desk general who does a job like our own Henry Stimson. Manfred von Brauchitsch is the top German field general, but not well known, while Guderian is the tank expert who overran the west. When it comes to Italian generals—are there any, and if so, where? Badoglio, the Caesar of Ethiopia, went the way of Gort and Gamelin. And Marshal Graziani, Libyan defender, "resigned" because of his many reverses.

That leaves America. At this moment, America's Washington-Jackson-Grant of the second World war is George Catlett Marshall, chief of staff and commanding general. He is a remarkably nice fellow. He has light blue eyes, and did not go to West Point. In army politics there is a good deal of feeling against the Pointers, so this is in Marshall's favor. Instead, he went to the little Point of the Southland—Virginia Military Institute at Lexington in the Shenandoah valley. V. M. I. also turned out Stonewall Jackson, is attached to the Arlington national soldier's cemetery.

The likeable Marshal Marshall gets up in the morning at 5:30, which is more than the privates have to do. He likes to ride his horse for an hour or so before breakfast. He gets to his office in the war department around 7 o'clock, though the department does not open, officially, till 8:45. He reads all his own morning mail—close to half a hundred letters per diem. Most of the long morning he bickers with congressmen, reporters, aides, or White-Housers. He has lunch, betimes, on the desk in his office—a luncheon of pie and milk, or perhaps a chocolate bar. All afternoon he labors and does all that he has to do: bickerings anew, confabs, hasty decisions, long-term plans. It's all in good hands. He takes home-work home with him and studies till far into the night hours, brushing up for the morrow. It's not an easy routine.

Marshall is a "Pershing" man, in the army lingo. He was a Pershing aide up to 1924, has Pershing ideas, and a Pershing background. In the same way, in France, Weygand is a Foch man, while Gamelin was a Joffre man, and Napoleon a Carnot man. This, in army circles, is for Marshall, and also against him. Pershing has always been something, perhaps, of a controversial figure. Marshall, however, is not. There is very little controversy about Marshall. This is very fortunate in the year of grace, 1941.

Knows How to Compromise.

Marshall is patient, likes order, dislikes chaos, and knows how to compromise if-or-when he has to.

Marshall's original purpose was a comparatively small, highly trained, perfectly equipped force of regulars, capable of attempting anything. After the fall of France, last June, came conscription and untrained masses of raw material. Marshall had to change his plans to conform to an emotional public opinion. A good many of the regulars have not cared for this. Their slogan has been "business as usual." Marshall himself is basically an infantry general, not a warped faddist on tanks or air. Every army unit, today, is half to three-quarters composed of mere recruits, but Marshall cannot help that. He has had to accept the draft, whether he liked it or not. Presumably, he does, but some of his officers, presumably, do not. They put little faith in mere numbers, and prefer quality to quantity. All this is debatable, and remains to be seen. Our military future appears to be in good hands, though, of course, the Anglo-French thought the same of Gort and Gamelin.

Marshall's first wound came at V. M. I.—a bayonet wound in a hazing accident. Let's hope he suffers no more knife—no more wounds—from the political hazing of that sometimes strident bedlam, the fleshpots of Washington intrigue.

Odds Are Against Rain on Easter Day

NEW YORK.—In the Fourth century of the Christian era, when the time of the Easter celebration was settled for future generations by the Council at Nicea, nothing was said concerning Easter weather. That vagary, therefore, has been left free to be anything it liked, and on about 16 Easters of the last 50, United States weather bureau records show, it has either snowed, hailed, rained, or been cold and blustery.

Back in 1875, records show the one-out-of-three chance that the weather might be inclement was possibly a disaster for the fashion-conscious. Rain-garb hadn't reached the well-styled stage, and the shapeless coat of the day was no attractive addition to milady's costume of Greek hair arrangement, Elizabethan ruff; Louis Quatorze jacket, the fan representing the Trianon, and the Moorish jewelry which she wore. Today, however, the raincoats of such fabrics as transparent korseal, made in the military fashion now being highlighted in the smart women's suits, make protective apparel a definite part of the Easter parade.

It's a bit difficult to imagine how the observance of Easter, purely religious in origin, became so indissolubly associated with spring millinery. Perhaps the well-known author of a book on etiquette, who said: "A superstition all over the world is that one should wear at least one new article of clothing on Easter, or bad luck will follow," may have had something to do with the sprouting of new finery. At any rate, back in the early 1890s, New York began observing the day by the famous parade along Fifth avenue, a now universal tradition.

favorable. The total acreage which farmers are planning to plant is about the same as last year. Some shifts are being made among the different crops because supplies of export farm commodities, such as cotton, tobacco, and wheat, are large, while the foreign demand has been much below normal. Farmers are trying, insofar as possible, to concentrate their efforts on producing those products that are used mostly in domestic consumption. The market outlook for these is most favorable.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Reviewed by CARTER FIELD

Civil war "expert" reveals Hitler as great military strategist... Reducing food production in U. S. seems unsound under present circumstances.

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—There were people in Britain, France, and the United States in 1939 who hoped for peace, and based part of their hope on the notion that Hitler would not willingly produce a situation which would lead to his own shelving.

The theory was that, if war came, the German army would at once perforce become supreme, and that its commanders would tolerate no interference.

The new British ambassador, talking to officials here, has pointed out several times that there is no intelligence in underrating Hitler's ability—that he is one of the great military strategists of all time.

This hitherto unrevealed side of the Nazi leader was brought back to Washington long enough ago to have warned us, for it was well before the war broke out at the end of the summer of 1939.

The story was brought by Albert W. Fox, one-time crack newspaper man and now Washington lawyer. Fox is one of the self-educated "experts" on American Civil war strategy. If you have ever heard of no such experts debating whether Stonewall Jackson took too much of a risk in his flank movement at Chancellorsville, or whether Lee should have taken Longstreet's advice instead of going to Gettysburg, you will know the breed. Suffice it to say that Fox is one of them, and that fellow experts admit that he is good.

VERSED IN CIVIL WAR

Early in 1939 Fox was in Germany. He had mutual friends who brought about a meeting with Hitler for him. What had been planned as a short greeting expanded to virtually an all-day session. Why? Because Hitler said something about the Civil war, and before any of his aides could say "Jeb Stuart" it was not Hitler who was snared—it was Fox. There was no escape. Not that Fox wanted to escape. No Civil war expert ever wants to retreat until the other expert has admitted all his errors.

On his return to Washington, Fox told a good many of us that he recognized his superior in Hitler.

"That man knows more about any given Civil war battle than I do," said Fox. Which statement, by the way, you will not appreciate, unless you know one of these experts and have seen them in action. "What is more," said Fox, "I never met anyone who knew so much about our Civil war campaigns."

Britain, U. S., Err In Food Production

Apparently the U. S. government is making the same mistake in delaying a start on increased food production that the British government is now so bitterly regretting. At the outbreak of the present war, in September, 1939, a survey by the London Times showed that there were 3,000,000 acres less under cultivation than had been producing food at the end of the last war.

The Scotch sheep raisers, for instance, were greatly discouraged over the obvious eagerness of the government to increase British consumption of Argentine beef. There were very sound economic reasons for increasing Argentina's ability to purchase British manufactured goods, but from a military standpoint they were very unsound.

It is a long sea haul from Buenos Aires to any British port, and preparing for war in other days, the British government overlooked the fact that in wartime they might not be able to spare the bottoms to bring this food, not to mention the possibility that German submarines, raiders, mines and bombers might make it impossible to get the ships through at all.

U. S. POLICY SIMILAR

There is not the same element of gambling with danger in the mistaken policy the United States has been pursuing, and apparently will continue to pursue for some months, at least, to come. But economically it is just as cockeyed.

The department of agriculture, with the enthusiastic approval of congress, is still working on the idea that it is sound business to pay the farmers NOT to raise food. The idea, of course, was always to hold the price up.

But the administration is struggling to hold ALL prices down. It doesn't talk about holding farm prices down, but obviously a rise in the cost of food would boost the cost of living, and hence tend to produce more labor troubles.

But, if the government would just take its hands off, it would not only save hundreds of millions of dollars which could be used for defense, but the farmers would eagerly rush back to the old habit of producing all they could. Thus, just by letting nature take its course, the country would avoid a food problem next year and the year afterward.

Gentian Violet New Treatment For Pin Worms

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

ONE of the distressing ailments of young children is pin worms as the intensive itching gets gradually worse toward evening and is at its worst at bedtime. During the night there is sleeplessness or a disturbed sleep with night terrors. The child loses weight and his blood becomes thin.

The prevention of infection or aggravation of the symptoms can often be effected by keeping the fingernails clean and cut short and washing the hands many times a day.

Getting rid of these tiny worms which look like short pieces of white thread is sometimes difficult. In my student days we were taught that giving tablets of santonin and calomel and enemas of an infusion of quassia chips was considered the most effective treatment.

For many years the routine treatment in children's hospitals has been enemas of infusion of quassia chips every morning for 7 to 10 days. Two ounces of quassia chips are put in a quart of water and the water allowed to boil down to one pint. The water is then strained free of the chips and used as an enema. This whole process is repeated each morning for the week or 10 days, water being allowed to cool.

The New Treatment.

A new treatment that may take the place of these other methods is gentian violet now used in staining organisms and injection of vessels.

Drs. Max J. Miller, Laurent Choquette, Wilfred Audet, R. F. Kelso and J. A. Guenette in the Canadian Medical Association Journal report their results in the use of gentian violet in tablet form in 29 school children, ranging from 6 to 13 years of age. The tablets were given over a period of 10 consecutive days, the children 6 to 9 getting two 3-20 grain tablets three times a day and those 10 to 13 years of age getting a 1/2-grain tablet three times a day. These gentian violet tablets cleared away the pin worms in 26 of the 29 cases.

Shock Treatment For Mental Cases

WHEN the shock treatment by insulin and Metrazol was first used some seven years ago, some physicians began treating many types of mental ailments. As this method of treatment was recommended for only certain types of mental cases, there were naturally many cases where the treatment was a great disappointment to the patients, their families, and the physicians themselves.

When should mental patients be given the shock treatment?

Dr. G. Wilse Robinson Jr., Kansas City, in Clinical Medicine and Surgery, states that he and his associates divide their patients into two groups, those above and those below 40 years of age. They find that Metrazol is more effective in those over 40 (and especially if the symptoms began under 40) and insulin in those under 40. Early cases of day dreaming should have insulin shock, but where there is marked depression present, Metrazol should be used, alone or in combination with insulin. The use of Metrazol and insulin combined seems to be effective in cases in which either insulin or Metrazol alone have failed.

Dr. Robinson points out that while there are points of difference among physicians regarding shock treatment, nevertheless all agree that if the symptoms are recent, or in the early stages—not more than six months—good results may be expected by shock treatment. The shock treatment is 2 1/2 times as effective as former methods and time spent in hospital has been shortened by six months on an average. The death rate of this type of case in mental hospitals is about 5 per cent per year, whereas the death rate in those treated by the shock method is about 2 per cent.

Shock treatment should be given only where there is competent supervision as convulsions can cause serious complications.

Remember, shock treatment is given in "selected" cases.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—How can I stop smoking cigarettes?

A.—Here are some suggestions: 1. No cigarettes before breakfast. 2. One cigarette after each meal. 3. If you must smoke at other times, eat a piece of candy before smoking each cigarette.

Q.—Will large pores of the face grow smaller as I mature?

A.—Washing face with hot water, drying it, then washing with cold will help keep skin elastic. This may prevent enlarged pores.

NEW IDEAS For Home-makers

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

DO YOU remember how old-fashioned comforters used to be tufted? They were made of two layers of fabric with cotton between and every four inches or so in rows the three layers of material were caught together with a stitch of wool yarn double which was then tied twice and clipped to make a fluffy tuft. Well, that is exactly the way many of today's smartest chair covers are made. A cover of this sort redeemed this old rocker and revealed its hidden charms.

The cover is plain, medium green glazed chintz tufted with dark green yarn and three inch dark green fringe is used around the bottom. A long zipper makes a center back closing. Each section of the cover was fitted on the chair in the muslin lining first and these pieces were used as patterns for cutting the chintz, also the cotton which was trimmed to be 3/4-inch smaller all around. After the pieces were tufted, as shown at the upper right, the seams were then made on the inside to catch the edges of the cotton in place.

NOTE: Are you planning to make slip covers this Spring? Mrs. Spears' Books 1 and 3 tell you exactly how. Book 1 gives directions for fitting and finishing slip covers for chairs and davenport. Book 3 shows you how to make a pattern first; also how to arrange openings in covers for chairs of unusual types, and how to anchor slip covers so they will stay neatly in place. Books are 10 cents each. Send order to:

PHILADELPHIA.—The general outlook for both agriculture and industry is favorable. There may be some offset to rising income by higher costs despite government pressure to keep prices from rising. But these will not be enough to keep farm income from rising to the highest level in 11 years. And the total national income is expected to reach a new peak.

THE STORY SO FAR:

Dusty King and Lew Gordon were joint owners of the vast King-Gordon range which stretched from Texas to Montana. When building up this string of ranches, they continually had to fight the unscrupulous Ben Thorpe. He rivaled King-Gordon in wealth.

CHAPTER VII

These men whom Roper now gathered about him hated a particular man, not only as lawless as themselves, but a man who was more than one man. Ben Thorpe was a thousand men; operating under Cleve Tanner in the south, and Walk Lasham in the north, his innumerable retainers filleted the plains from the Rio Grande to the Big Horn. That Roper's men hated Ben Thorpe was no coincidence; Roper had picked men of personal grudge. Most of them had first been outlawed because they had not suited a single organization — the organization of Ben Thorpe.

Up and down and across half of Texas, constantly in the saddle, Bill Roper threaded his new organization. Sometimes Dry Camp Pierce was with him; more often he traveled alone. These famous gunfighters and outlawed men whom Roper gathered were just youngsters, mostly. Some of them were true killers; some merely reckless kids who had got off on the wrong foot. All of them were badly wanted by what little law there was.

One night in early June, Dry Camp Pierce and Bill Roper sat in the back room of a saloon, deep in Texas.

"Look," Dry Camp Pierce said. "I've stole cows until I could pave my way to hell with their hides. But—I don't know—steal cows for Dusty's kid—"

Bill Roper's teeth flashed clean in his grin. "Whose cows?"

"I've stole cows—"

"You're going to steal cows that belong to me, now."

"I'm half of King-Gordon, now split. I've taken, out of King-Gordon, seven camps without cows; now I'm claiming the cows that Thorpe took from Dusty King. And from some other men that we're going to lend a hand to, pretty soon."

Dry Camp Pierce—he was called that because he hated to camp too near to water—went to work for Bill Roper as he had never worked before; and thus the king of cow thieves, the brand changer extraordinary, for once aligned on the side of the law that was not.

Ten rustlers' camps hooked into Thorpe-Tanner territory.

But Dry Camp also helped in other ways.

A hot June dusk, five days after the meeting at Whipper Forks, found Bill Roper at the Dry Saddle Crossing, where he was to meet Lee Harnish; and this meeting, too, was arranged by Dry Camp Pierce, though by this time Pierce was already far away.

Here ran the broad, many-channeled river, dividing two countries—a river whose split wanderings made two miles of intermittent shallows. At this border of a vast, imperceptibly rolling prairie stood a narrow string of adobe shacks. That was the Dry Saddle Crossing.

Two men—Bill Roper and Lee Harnish—sat in front of one of those abandoned shacks, and tried to get together.

"I've always understood," Roper said, "that you were acquainted some, below the line."

Harnish's hard eyes studied Roper, and for a little while nothing could be heard except the mourning of doves in the willow scrub by the water. Next to Dry Camp Pierce, Lee Harnish was the oldest of those to join Roper; he was twenty-eight. He was tall and lank, sun-baked almost to the color of an Indian; his green eyes were curiously blank, impenetrable, and he liked to look his man in the eye with the peculiar fixity seen in the gaze of hawks.

"I've been down there some," he admitted. "I've made a few drives into Chihuahua; one drive to Mexico City."

"If you had a big wet herd run to you just below the line, would you know how to get rid of it?"

"I can't make out your hand," Harnish said. "King-Gordon never swung the long rope yet, that I heard of."

"I'm not King-Gordon now. My stunt is to smash Cleve Tanner; and I don't care what it costs."

"What's wrong with backing him into a shoot-out, if that's what you want?"

"That comes later. If I bust Tanner I can bust Thorpe. But if Tanner is gunned before he's busted, Thorpe will take over in Texas, and the chance to break up his Texas layout will be gone."

"You ain't going to bust him by running off a few head of cattle. This river crossing is slow work, kid."

"I figure to cross five thousand head within the next three months," Roper told him.

"Five thousand head won't even scratch the hide of Thorpe and Tanner, son."

"I know that as well as you. What it will do, it'll draw Tanner to throw his warriors onto the border. That's what I want. Because by then I'll be working somewhere else."

And power, but had gained his position through wholesale cattle rustling and gunplay. One afternoon King was killed by Thorpe and his two assistants, Cleve Tanner and Walk Lasham. King's adopted son, Bill Roper, decided to start a cattle war.

"And you want me to take 'em on the other side—is that the idea?" "I want three dollars a head, American gold, paid off as the cattle come out of the water."

Roper's ways of gathering his wild bunch were diverse, as diverse as the saddle men he gathered. One way or another, picking up a man here, three more there, he got all he needed, and more.

But certain other things had to be done, in order that the wild bunch would have work to do, planned in such a way that something would be accomplished that would stay accomplished.

On a steamy afternoon early in July, Bill Roper sat in Fred Maxim's San Antonio law office. Maxim was an attorney who, some thought, had worked under a different name, somewhere before; but here, assuredly he was in no one's pay.

"I'm not asking the likes of you what's what," Bill Roper said. "I want to know who actually owns range rights on the Graham stand."

Roper's ways of gathering his wild bunch were diverse.

The hard-bitten little man across the desk from Roper was still cadgy. "When it comes to ousting a man from possession—"

"You know who 'ousted' Bob Graham and his family from possession, Cleve Tanner took over that outfit by main horse-and-gun power, without decent cause or reason. Everybody knows that. I'm asking you now—"

"Taylor and Graves are already doing everything that can be done to regain possession of Graham's outfit," Maxim said, smiling.

It was the smile that Roper liked. "Suppose I hold the Bob Graham lands, and Bob Graham's family are living on it."

"Bob Graham hasn't got possession," Maxim said.

"Suppose he did have?"

"Never could happen. Ben Thorpe."

"Shut up a minute," Roper said. "I'm not asking you to put Graham back in possession of his range. I'm not asking you to save him from being put off again in the way he was before. What I want to know is, can you head off some cooked-up legal interference with Graham, after he's in possession again?"

Fred Maxim thought it over. "I can only promise you that I can cause considerable delay," he said. "Months of delay?"

"Providing you can show possession—I'll keep you clear until hell freezes."

"That's all I want."

Still July, at Willow Creek—

A barren range of hills, sand hills; golden in the dawn, purple in the twilight, barren always. Beneath them, what had been the Willow Creek camp of the old King-Gordon. In the bunkhouse nearest the river, five men lounging around a little room.

"All right, you hard guys," Bill Roper said; "you know who told you to come here. Dry Camp Pierce told you to come here. Maybe he told you what you could look for here, huh?"

These four gunfighters who met Roper here were none of them older than Bill; yet each was famous as a killer in his own right. Of them all Bill Roper alone had no name, no reputation. Yet, in respect for the name of Dusty King, they had come to hear him out.

Nate Liggett, a round-faced kid with eyelashes that looked as if they had been powdered with white dust, said, "Well, what seems to be your offer?"

against Thorpe in Texas. He made this decision against the strong opposition of his partner, Lew Gordon. Bill's sweetheart, Jody Gordon, pleaded frantically with him to turn back, but could not change his grim determination.

"I guess you already know Bob Graham," Roper said. "You know how a warrior gang of Cleve Tanner's jumped down on him, on some thin excuse, and run him off his range. They even took over his house and his windmill and his corals. Now, I aim to hand back that range to Bob Graham; he's waiting in Bigspring for the word. Your part of the job is simple enough—you just go and take it away from the Tanner bunch."

"Simple, huh? Just how do you figure this simple trick is to be done?"

"A lawyer in San Antonio kept the Rangers off when Tanner jumped Graham. Now we've got another better lawyer in San Antonio to keep them off when Graham jumps Tanner. The only question is, who's got enough salt to grab that range—and then hang onto it?"

"And what do we get out of all this?"

"Graham takes over the outfit and runs it. You hang around and help him, and see that he doesn't get run off again. For that you get a half interest in the outfit. You split it among you any way you see fit. I'll back Graham with cattle, and what other stuff he needs."

Nate Liggett said, "Bill, I don't see where we come in for no advantage."

"If you're satisfied with the lone wolf stuff you've been pulling, I haven't got anything to offer you," Roper admitted. "But I'll tell you this—the boys that string with me now will see the day when they'll run Texas; and Cleve Tanner, and Ben Thorpe, too, will be busted up and forgot!"

"It's a hefty order!"

"Maybe it is. This Graham business is a kind of experiment; it'll work if you make it work. But if it goes through okay—it's only the beginning, you hear me? You string with me a little while; and maybe, by God, we'll show a couple of people something."

CHAPTER VIII

Hot, dry days of early August—

As the first sun struck with a red heat across the plains, the Tanner men who held the Graham ranch were already saddling. All over Texas, cowmen were throwing together the last trail herds of the year; it was time for these Tanner men to roll their chuck wagons again, to round up the last of the trail-fit stock that remained in the herds which had belonged to Bob Graham.

Out from what had been the Graham corral, three riders swept through the dusty dawn; but they had hardly left the pole fences behind when six other riders confronted them, rising into their saddles like Comanches, out of the brush. The strangers closed in a semi-circle, unhurriedly, their carbines in their hands. In another minute or two the three Tanner riders were grouped in a defensive knot, while from the semi-circle of the raiders Nate Liggett jogged forward to talk it over.

"I don't think you want to go on," he said. "I don't even think you want to work for this outfit any more."

Two nights later, one hundred and fifty miles away—

With the approach of dusk, a peculiar light lay upon the valley of the Potreritos. In a reach of open grass a herd of five hundred head bunched loosely—tame, heavy cattle, already well removed by breeding from the old, wild, long-horn strain. But they had not bunched voluntarily. They shuffled restlessly, watching the brush! something was happening around them that they did not understand.

As the light failed, the figures of horsemen emerged from the brush, cutting mile-long shadows into the flat rays of sunset; the huge, heavy-shouldered man who signaled to his spread-out cowboys by turning his horse this way or that, in Indian horse language, was Dave Shannon.

They did not harass the cattle. Only, between sunset and the next daylight, no cow took a step other than in the direction of the Mexican border.

Dry-grass season; Texas scorched by the hot winds—

All across the southern ranges a peculiar thing was happening. As word spread from twenty points of disturbance, certain of the older cattlemen began to sense that there was a curious, almost systematic order to what in itself seemed a widespread disruption. All over the Big Bend country, eastward almost to the well settled Nueces, westward beyond the barren Pecos, northward to the fever line, was breaking a spotty wave of raids of an unparalleled boldness. Far apart, but almost simultaneously, hell had busted loose in a great number of places, covering more than half of Texas.

CHRIST SHOWS HIMSELF ALIVE

LESSON TEXT—Luke 24:13-17, 25-35.
GOLDEN TEXT—I am he that liveth, and was dead; and behold, I am alive for evermore.—Revelation 1:18.

Certainty and assurance—these are at the heart of our observance of Easter. We declare with Paul, "Now is Christ risen from the dead" (I Cor. 15:20), and that He is "declared to be the Son of God with power . . . by the resurrection from the dead" (Rom. 1:4). We would join the apostles who "with great power gave . . . witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus" (Acts 4:33).

Someone may say, "That's well enough for you who have faith in God, but I'm bewildered, uncertain, fearful, in a disordered world. What shall I do?" Come with us as, in our lesson, we join two men who had become bewildered, who felt that all their hopes had been crushed, that the future was only to be feared.

We join them as they walk wearily along the road from Jerusalem to Emmaus. Suddenly there is Another with the little group. Let us listen to their conversation. First we find:

I. Hidden Eyes and Slow Hearts

(vv. 13-17, 25, 26).
The two sad men who had left Jerusalem to go to Emmaus were disciples of our Lord who had just been through the crushing experience of seeing Him crucified. Now, as the jeering mob held triumphant sway in the city, they left the dead Christ (as they supposed) in the tomb and went their way. True, there had been some reports on the morning of the third day that the women had seen Jesus alive (vv. 23, 24), but their hope and faith was at such low ebb that they could not—or did not—believe. Even when Jesus appeared to walk with them and question them, they did not know Him.

Eyes closed by unbelief; faith hindered by doubt and fear; a despondent heart slow to believe God—how very effectively these shut out the blessing of God and of His Word, even to the believer. Even deeper is the darkness in which the unbeliever finds himself. But all is not lost; there is One here who can open unseeing eyes and warm cold hearts—even Jesus.

II. Burning Hearts and Opened Eyes

(vv. 26-32).
Although they did not realize it (how slow we are to appreciate our blessings!) until after He was gone (v. 32), their hearts began to burn within them as soon as He began to expound the Scriptures to them.

What a Bible exposition that was, as Christ Himself opened all that the Scriptures taught concerning Him! Bible teachers have talked about, and it makes one's heart burn just to read their suggestions (see for example Morgan on Luke, page 278). Little wonder that these men were "strangely warmed" as they listened.

The way to have a burning heart is to read God's Word or to have it expounded by a Spirit-filled teacher or preacher. Especially is there blessing in reading and studying what the sacred Book teaches about our blessed Lord.

With the heart "strangely warmed," as John Wesley described his Aldersgate experience, comes the opened eye. "They knew him" (v. 31) in the breaking of the bread. Perhaps they saw the scar in His hand, or possibly they identified a familiar gesture or something in His voice; but until their hearts were warmed they did not see. Paul knew that truth when he declared: "But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned" (I Cor. 2:14).

Some reader who has trouble believing in the resurrection will find the problem solved when he meets Christ and has his heart changed in regeneration. What follows?

III. Quickened Feet and Glad Testimony

(vv. 33-35).
The seven miles (sixty furlongs, v. 13) which had passed so slowly were now quickly retraced. They had glorious good news to bring to the disciples at Jerusalem. How swift are the feet of the one who has good tidings to bear (see Rom. 10:15). One wonders why so many professed Christians are so slow about carrying His message. Can it be that they do not yet know the risen Christ? For if we know Him, surely "we do not well" to keep silent in a day of good tidings (II Kings 7:9).

Note in verse 34 that before they could speak, the others gave them the good news of the resurrection. It is proper and delightful that believers share spiritual blessings (Rom. 1:11, 12). That's why we come together in God's house.

Brother in the Lord, Christian sister, how long is it since you had a new and stirring experience of the presence of Christ? Not necessarily spectacular or exciting, but a real spiritual experience. Let's ask Him (or it!)

THE RIGHT MAN

By MEREDITH SCHOLL

(Associated Newspapers.)
WNU Service.

"NOW there's a girl," said Allen Cotter, pointing over the heads of the dancers, "who's worth writing home about."

Tim Bingham, who stood at Allen's elbow at one end of the stag line, nodded. "One in a million, he agreed. 'It's a pity she couldn't have done better when she picked a husband for herself.'"

"Married Ames Forbes, didn't she? What's wrong with him? As I remember Ames, he wasn't a bad egg."

"It isn't that. It's simply that he doesn't appreciate Dora. Take tonight, for example. He hasn't danced with her once. He acts like he'd never met the girl."

Allen eased away from the stag line and found a seat in a remote corner of the room. Strangely, the things that Tim had just said were an accurate interpretation of his own thoughts. Long ago he and Dora had been sweethearts. And now as Allen reflected upon the variety of experiences and adventures which he had undergone since leaving Cookeville, he told himself for the hundredth time that nothing in his life had been much finer or beautiful than those sweetheart days with Dora Mead.

And now Dora was married! Well, he had expected that. He had expected it even though down deep in his heart he had half hoped all during the train ride from Boston to Cookeville that she wouldn't be.

Allen smiled wistfully as he recalled his disappointment. Of course it was silly and entirely unreasonable. After all, you couldn't expect a girl as sweet and lovely and as fine as Dora Mead to remain single all her life.

She seemed happy and contented and decidedly pleased with the dance.

After the first shock of it Allen hadn't been wholly displeased. To begin with, Ames Forbes was about as fine a youth as Cookeville had to offer. He had been in their class in high school, and since graduation had become a credit to his town and his family.

Allen remembered what Tim Bingham had just told him. Well, you couldn't tell about men these days.

The thing was puzzling. Allen sank back in the chair which he had located in an alcove behind a palm tree and began to brood. Could it be that Dora and Ames were unhappy? Could it be that Ames had actually tired of his charming young wife? It seemed incredible. Time had, if anything, added to Dora's loveliness and charm. It didn't seem quite possible that any man could tire of her.

And yet it was obvious that Ames had other interests when at a party, besides devoting his attention to his wife. During the week that Allen had been in Cookeville he had seen a good deal of the pair, and not once had he witnessed any demonstration of affection between them.

Unconsciously Allen clenched his fists. If Ames were making her unhappy . . .

A young couple were dancing on the other side of the palm tree. It was a dreamy waltz and the lights had been dimmed. Allen couldn't distinguish the figures very clearly, but he knew, without making half an effort, that the girl was Dora. Her head was resting on her partner's shoulder. She seemed happy and contented and decidedly pleased with the dance.

As Allen watched, the music stopped and during the brief interval before the orchestra swung into the encore, Allen saw Dora's partner take hold of the girl's arm and lead her quickly into the alcove where sat Allen.

Allen was not naturally a curious person. Other people's business was their own. And ordinarily he would have stood up and moved away, leaving the young couple to their own devices. But this situation was a little different. A lot different, Allen thought. He was sure that Dora and her partner had not seen him. The alcove was only dimly lighted and the palm tree separated them. Without moving he could witness quite clearly the scene that was being enacted within a few feet of him. Instantly upon sitting down, Dora had reached up and drawn the man's face down to her own. He crushed her to him and held her close for, it seemed, an eternity.

And in that moment something happened inside of Allen that shattered every beautiful illusion and optimistic outlook he had ever entertained toward life and women.

No one, of all the people Allen had ever known, could have so completely changed his whole viewpoint as did Dora in that moment when he saw her in the arms of another man, disloyal to her husband, acting as would any cheap, common wench.

Allen cursed under his breath and wished he were anywhere but there in the alcove.

Of one thing he was sure. He had misjudged Ames Forbes. It was Dora's fault. Dora had been the deceiver, the cause of their trouble. And Ames, good, noble Ames, had gone on without saying a word, covering up that misery he must have felt, merely being polite to his wife in public without once indicating he hated her for her treachery.

Suddenly a fierce anger welled up in Allen's soul. It wasn't fair. It wasn't fair to Ames or to him. Dora had been his guiding light as much as she'd been Ames'. She had served now to shatter his every illusion as she had served to shatter those of her husband.

Allen found himself on his feet. He wasn't thinking clearly, but he knew he was going to do something drastic.

The music had stopped again. The lights were brighter. Dora and her partner were standing up.

At that moment, Allen blindly enraged, swept aside the palm leaves and stepped in front of them. With one hand he reached up, grabbed hold of the collar of Dora's partner's coat, and jerked him about so that he could look into his face.

Dora screamed. The man whose collar was suddenly tightened by Allen's grip swore in sudden surprise. Dancers who were walking off the floor stopped and stared. And Allen Cotter's mouth sagged open and a slow flush spread over his face and up about his temples.

For the man with whom Dora had kept her rendezvous away from the prying eyes of the public was Ames Forbes, her husband!

Earliest Known Windows Were Merely 'Openings'

Windows were originally nothing more than openings in a wall for light and ventilation.

Our word window is supposed to be derived from two Scandinavian words meaning "wind eye."

Some authorities, however, suppose the word to have been originally "wind-door," referring to the doors or shutters to prevent the wind from blowing through the openings.

The ancient Egyptians and Greeks used thin slabs of marble for window-panes while the Chinese used rice paper for the same purpose.

In Genesis we read that the Lord told Noah, "A window shalt thou make to the ark," and that after forty days Noah "opened the window that he had made."

Referring to the temple built by Solomon, I Kings 6:4 says: "And for the house he made windows of narrow lights."

The early Romans appear to have made window-panes, perhaps of transparent shells, to illuminate their baths.

Window-glass as we know it now was probably first made in the Twelfth century by the Anglo-Saxon monk Theophilus.

Although some window glass was made at the early glassworks at Jamestown, in Virginia, glass window-panes were not common in America until about the time of the Revolution.

Alaska Air Bases

When William Seward bought Alaska from the Russians, 73 years ago, paying them $7,200,000, the purchase was denounced as "Seward's Folly." The frozen northern waste, it was held, was hardly worth a dollar, let alone the price paid. But today, to protect Alaska, the United States is preparing to lay out $25,000,000 on five air bases, and the governor of the territory says five more bases will be needed.

Alaska from its fisheries alone adds more to the national income of the United States each year than the capital sum it is proposed to spend on air bases. The frozen waste of 30 years ago has become an asset of high value with fisheries, mineral, timber and agricultural resources. Besides, it is the republic's defense outpost to the west, and in a world full of peril, like the one in which we live, outposts are of first importance.

The Alaska air bases are intended primarily, of course, for the protection of the United States. They also serve to protect Canada, and British Columbia can hardly be indifferent to the proposal to place one of them on Metlakatla island, in the Panhandle, just south of Ketchikan.

Ribs of Beef Roast

For a really superior roast, standing ribs of beef should weigh at least six pounds. For the small family, this may seem prohibitive at first thought, but in reality a large beef roast may make several return appearances with equal success. A two rib roast or, preferably, a three rib roast is large enough to be roasted fat side up, using the rib bones as a rack so that while cooking the melted fat will drip down in a self-basting process. At the first appearance for a company dinner, the thick center or "eye" muscles of the roast will make a "sure-to-please" meat service. Green pepper cups filled with escalloped corn, pan browned potatoes and a garden-fresh salad would be good companion foods.

EASTER PARTY

The Chesckamay group of Camp Fire Girls enjoyed a very lovely Easter party last Monday afternoon at the home of their guardian, Mrs. Thelma Crist. When the girls arrived they were delighted to learn that they were about to start on a real "Treasure Hunt". Little verses nine in all such as
When I knock at the door,
I say "Come In."
I'm not very big,
And my light is dim."
Look near the door
Close to the wall—
Don't hurry so fast,
You might take a fall.
were hidden in all parts of the house and what a scamper there was. At last the treasure was found and the girls sat down to enjoy a huge dish of chocolate Easter eggs.

Next came the "Rabbit Work Shop". Here the girls actually made beautiful pussy willow Easter cards, chicks as they emerged from the shell and "My Lady, in her Easter hat". The original designs were many and all were charming. The work shop closed and the girls enjoyed out of door games until called for "eats."

The table was really beautiful. Sandwiches, cocoa, dear little nests made out of cup cakes and candy was served. Each girl wore a bright yellow cap as she read her "fortune". It was a happy group of girls who gathered to thank Mrs. Crist, and her co-hostess, Mrs. John Swisher for a happy afternoon.

June Miller celebrated her 14th birthday last Saturday. Guests were Kathleen Bartsch, Elva Olsen, Lucille Kasper, Jean and Valerie Albers, Florence Ceizyk, Eleanor Mach temas, Ruth Gustafson and Judy Andres.

Everyone enjoyed a good time playing games and winning prizes. Refreshments were served.

Miss Doris Mae Wennerdahl returned Sunday from the hospital following a minor operation and is coming along fine. She was out for the first time Wednesday.

Kay and Freddie Ryck, professional dancers and their six year old daughter Deane, spent the week end with their uncle and aunt Mr. and

The Twanaka Camp Fire Girls

The Twanaka Camp Girl Girls went on a hike Tuesday which was their weekly meeting. They walked out to the Kennedy Woods, roasted potatoes, frankfurts and marshmallows and drank milk to complete the feast. All declared they had a wonderful time, even if they did get black as coal and had burnt tongues. After the feast they walked back to town. Those who attended were: Mrs. Mary Maxwell guardian, Mrs. Edna Johnson, assistant guardian, Elva Olson, June Willman, Amelia Cavett, Alfreda Willman, Margaret Bartholemew and Pearl Swanson. Mary Jane Consineau could not attend due to the three day measles. It seems Mary Jane is going back to her childhood days, first the mumps, and now the measles. Poor Mary Jane.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Are Sin, Disease, and Death Real?" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, April 13.

The Golden Text was, "The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? The Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?" (Psalms 27:1).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Arise, shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee" (Isaiah 60:1).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Whatever is governed by God, is never for an instant deprived of the light and might of intelligence and life. We are sometimes led to believe that darkness is as real as light; but Science affirms darkness to be only a mortal sense of the absence of light, at the coming of which darkness loses the appearance of reality. So sin and sorrow, disease and death, are the suppositional absence of life, God, and see as phantoms of error before truth and love" (p. 215).

ORLAND PARK

PTA MEETS APRIL 17

As previously announced the April meeting of the Orland Park PTA is to be held Thursday evening, April 17. The program will be dedicated to "Our School—Our Greatest Asset—Our Greatest Responsibility".

Mr. Rawland, Superintendent of Schools will speak on the aims and accomplishments of our public school and Mr. W. R. Schussler, Jr., president of the School Board will speak on the "Why and the How" of things pertaining to the school.

There will also be demonstrations of class work and exhibits of student projects, after which the parents will be taken on a tour of inspection of the school building. Both Mr. Rawland and Mr. Schussler will have some interesting and enlightening facts and figures in regard to the operation of our school and every parent is urged to be present to learn first hand what is being accomplished for our children.

Wm. Beagley left Monday for Jackson, Minn., to see his sister, Mrs. Peter Dilly, who is seriously ill.

Miss Adella Schmadeke and Mrs. August Schmadeke are visiting with friends and relatives in Missouri.

The present village board will hold their final meeting next Monday evening. The next meeting will be in charge of the new incoming board to be elected next Tuesday.

The Ladies Aid society of the Orland Christ Lutheran church will hold an Easter bake sale in the J. F.

Schmadeke store this Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

The annual school election will be held this Saturday night, April 12 in the local school. A caucus will be held at 6:30 o'clock with the election at 7 o'clock.

The term of Ralph Town as school director expires and in view of the fact that he has set a very creditable record it is felt he should be re-elected.

The front of the Zerbs building which was quite badly damaged when an automobile crashed into it early in the morning of Feb. 16th, is being repaired. New portions of the brick wall have been laid and a large new window is being installed.

John Helenhouse who was re-elected to the office of constable of Orland township, qualified the past week.

The Orland Legion Post is preparing to hold a dance the forepart of May. More details regarding this dance will be published next week.

Born March 30th to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Doogan, a daughter in the Silver Cross hospital. Mrs. Doogan returned to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Nicolai Tuesday where she will remain for a while. The infant is still in the hospital, but will be brought home soon. She has been named Carol Lynn.

There was a gratifying attendance at the services of the Orland Park Methodist church Palm Sunday. The floral decorations made a beautiful setting for the Cross. Appropriate music by the choir added to the inspiration of the service.

The Adult Bible Class will meet

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Ullrich and son Laverne were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Betnel.

Mrs. Mae Bormet and sons Vernon and Herman of Lockport were guests last week of Mr. and Mrs. George Bethel.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Storms and Mr. and Mrs. Irving Jensen and family were guests Sunday in the Alfred Bethel home.

Your correspondent wishes to make a correction. In last week's column a news item appeared of the meeting of the "Ladies Aid Society of the Trinity German Lutheran" church. This should have read "of the Trinity Lutheran church."

Mrs. Charles Keiser entertained the members of the afternoon Pinocle club in her home last Thursday. Mrs. Krohn was a guest. Mrs. A. W. Walsh will entertain the club next.

Today's Lesson in Flag Etiquette

- The flag should always be flown or displayed with the stars to the left and with the stripes floating to the right.
- When hanging with the stripes in a vertical position, the stars should always appear in upper left hand corner.
- On parade the American flag always claims the place of honor—at the right.
- When flown at half-staff the flag should be hoisted to the peak for an instant and then lowered to the half-staff position. Before lowering the flag it should be raised again to the peak. On Memorial Day, May 30, the flag should be displayed at half-staff from sunrise until noon and at full staff from noon until sunset.

RHYTHM ROLLERS!

RED! RED! Not shirts, but the MEASLES! We dedicate this week's column to mumps, measles, Mary Jane or contagious, catching Cousineau.

The whizzing, wavering, weary Wally is turning over his Social Security to the muscular, magnetic, massive Melbourne.

Maybe Melbourne can put the brakes on the speeding romance between Lester and Shirley with a few red lights. Green lights have given them the go signal too long.

Romeo might have carried Juliet but not the way Freddy carried "Swanie". Romeo had muscles but no skates, Freddy has both.

A swoop, a swerve and Elva is in position for skating backward and ready for a one point landing.

We won't giggle too much about Junes triple fall with Hank because, "Swanie" and June presented ample entertainment with their Fox(?) Trot during Robbers Couples. Rich proved to be a very good Kopy Kat.

The Greco girls looked sweet enough to eat in their peppermint dresses Sunday night. Let's have a repetition.

It seems W. N. was waylaid by S. M. in that special corner. P. S. We thought the corner was reserved.

The crowd was tense. Rose and Jane gave out with lusty cheers. The signals were called-74-48-2-

HIKE! An anonymous missel streaked through the smoky ozone into the grasping clutches of Ray. Then the spectacular tackle on Friday No. 0 by Peters No. 000 and beneath them all lay the puny form of Rich No. 000. The crowd was awed by the speeding buy dignified figure of Melbourne, the hero of the day, who laid before No. 00's stockings feet a shapeless, mangled, mass of shoe leather—her shoe.

Our weary defeated football team now departed for home with hopes that they would each make a touch down with that certain one. We know everything was the same except Freddy had a Rose that wasn't Red.

Let's all carry the ball until next week—don't fall.

LEGISLATIVE HAPPENINGS

By Bernice T. Van der Vries
Representative, 7th District
General Assembly of Illinois

The bright green handbooks of the Illinois Legislature which made their appearances in the mail boxes of the members on St. Patrick's Day revealed some interesting information regarding the 51 members of the senate and the 151 (two have died since the election) of the house. In the senate ten are lawyers, five are farmers and three are merchants. There are two each who list their occupations as grain dealers, insurance, insurance and real estate, law and farming, publishers, real estate and theatre owners. The remainder of the members are spread among a variety of professions and businesses, with one to each.

In the house there are thirty-five lawyers, fifteen farmers and ten engaged in real estate. The business of merchandising claims seven, insurance, five, and real estate, five. Fifty-nine other professions and occupations are listed. Two members give legislation as their sole occupation. Considering the fact that three to four days a week are given over to legislation in Springfield each week for six months and most of the time of the members when at home weekends, and two who listed legislation as their occupations were the most accurate.

Labor Legislation

Labor legislation as proposed in the Wage and Hour bills continues to be the most controversial business in the Assembly at the present time. This is reflected in the mail of the members and by the attendance in Springfield at the hearings and the opponents. Many legislators are beginning to ask whether this is the time to give labor everything which it demands in increased wages and shorter hours when men who are drafted sacrifice their professions and jobs and serve at $21 a month with no specified hours of labor.

A bill providing aid for dependent children are introduced on Wednesday under the sponsorship of four Republicans and four Democrats. It will be known henceforth as A.D.C. It calls for an appropriation of $16,000,000 dollars, one half of which would be paid by the Federal Government if Illinois passes a bill which conforms to the standards of the Federal Social Security board. Proponents of the bill had stated before the bill was introduced that six million would be sufficient for Illinois' share and that 70,000 children would qualify, but the new figures give the possibility of 92,000 being recipients. The present mother's pension which is administered through the courts would be abolished and the proposed aid would be handled through county welfare committees.

GOOD TIDINGS FOR THE EASTER BREAKFAST
(See Recipes Below)

EGGSTRAORDINARY!

With the passing of winter and the arrival of spring comes the joyful Easter season, bringing with it new life and new hope. Why not express these good tidings in the traditional Easter Sunday breakfast?

Make your Easter breakfast the No. 1 breakfast of the year—the time when the whole family, and guests, too, perhaps, gather leisurely 'round a gaily decorated table laden with their favorite early-morn dishes.

Let color-splashed eggs be the centerpiece. You can use those that the children have "discovered" in their traditional pre-breakfast egg hunt.

Pile them high in the center of a grass-filled Easter basket. Then, to complete the scheme, mark each person's place at the table with an egg caricature—Uncle Sam, an Indian Chief, Mr. Rabbit or even a pert young lady.

"While they're still 'oh-ing' and 'ah-ing,' serve 'eggs in nests'—just to keep the theme in mind. To complete your menu, you'll of course want glasses of cold fruit juice, crisp ham slices or bacon curls and steaming popovers. It's taken for granted that you'll make plenty of hot coffee. They couldn't ask for more!

*Eggs in Nests.
(See picture at top of column)
1 egg
1/2 teaspoon salt
Butter
5 bread sticks

Separate egg, placing white in small, deep bowl and retaining yolk in one of the half shells. Beat egg white until stiff and slightly dry (when dry, it will have a slightly coarse appearance). Pile egg white in oven-proof cup or dish in which 5 bread sticks have been arranged. Drop yolk into depression made in center of egg white. Bake in a moderately slow oven (325 degrees F.) until bread tips and egg white are delicately browned (about 15 minutes). Season with salt, pepper if desired, and a lump of butter dropped on yolk. Serves 1.

Just in case you're wondering how the bread sticks are made, here are directions. Because of their dainty arrangement in the serving dishes, I call them Bread Buttercups:

Remove the crusts from a loaf of uncut bread. Cut lengthwise slices from the loaf. Trim the slices so that they are about 1 1/2 inches wide and the ends pointed. Brush with an egg and milk mixture and arrange in baking cups. It is best to brush the tips with a little melted butter so that they will brown more readily.

*Pop-Overs.

2 eggs, beaten
3/4 cup milk
1 cup flour
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon melted fat
Combine eggs and milk. Pour over sifted dry ingredients. Beat with a rotary beater until smooth. Add butter. Beat. Pour batter into hot greased muffin pans, filling one-third full. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) for 35 to 45 minutes. Dry in oven about 10 minutes with

LYNN SAYS:

Eggs join with other foods to fill your needs and produce your health. They are among our best sources of the muscle building proteins. They are high in iron which is needed to build good red blood. They supply phosphorus which forms a part of every active cell of the body.

When "peeling" hard-cooked eggs, crackle the shells, then start the peeling at the rounded end of the egg. Holding the eggs under running cold water or dipping in a bowl of cold water helps to ease the shell off, leaving a smooth, unbroken surface of white.

heat turned off. Yield: 10 large Pop-Overs.

And now a word about the cleverly decorated Easter eggs that appear in the basket above.

You'll agree that even the most aristocratic rabbit should be proud to claim these original eggs. Decorating them is both easy and inexpensive. You'll need large white eggs, a package of dyes from the Five and Ten, a spoon-shaped wire hook with an end to use as a handle (for dipping eggs into the dye), rubber cement and stickers.

Buy gold and silver stars, dots in various colors, small red hearts, linen reinforcements that are really meant for loose-leaf notebooks, flower seals such as tulips, and red and blue legal seals. Most of these come in several sizes, but the small ones are the easiest to glue on a curved surface.

After the well-known hard boiling process you use your imagination about covering the eggs with stars and dots. Then try arranging hearts in four-leaf clover patterns, or turn the points outward and stick them around a center dot, as flower petals. All-over designs of blue legal seals and stripes of the red ones, pasted so closely that they overlap a bit, are quite effective. There are endless arrangements, and you have the advantage of being able to soak off and replace designs until you are pleased, without wasting an egg.

What to do with the Easter supply of hard-cooked eggs? I'm coming to that. Coarsely chopped or sliced hard-cooked eggs in superbly seasoned cream or white sauce become CREAMED EGGS. They will give luncheon and dinner menus a lift when served on crisply fried cornmeal slices, potato cakes, or waffles.

With eggs and cheese such boon companions, and cheese a prime favorite, too, ESCALLOPED EGGS and CHEESE is another use for Easter eggs—after Easter.

Creamed Eggs.

6 eggs, hard cooked
4 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons flour
1 1/2 cups milk
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1/4 teaspoon salt
Dash of cayenne or nutmeg
Melt butter, add flour and stir until smooth. Add cold milk. Cook and stir constantly until thick. Remove from fire and place over hot water. Add seasonings and sliced eggs, cut lengthwise. Stir carefully. Serves 4.

Escalloped Eggs and Cheese.
1 1/2 tablespoons butter
1 1/2 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1/2 teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 cup soft bread crumbs
3 tablespoons melted butter
1/2 cup grated cheese
6 to 8 hard cooked eggs

Prepare a sauce of butter, flour, milk and seasonings. Arrange in greased casserole in layers using three-quarters of the crumbs, the sliced eggs, cheese and sauce. Top with remaining one-fourth cup of crumbs, mixed with the melted butter. Bake in a moderate oven, (350 degrees F.) until sauce is bubbly and top nicely browned, about 40 minutes. Serve plain or with tomato sauce. Serves 4 or 5.

THE PAPERS OF PRIVATE PURKEY

Dear Ma:

I wish you wud stop worrying about me as I am all right except for fallen arches, flu, chilblains, a limp in both legs and indigestion. But I feel a lot less like squawking since I talked to an old timer up here who was in the last war and from what he says I guess we have all modern improvements up here now. He says in the last war the draft army just had tents like they wuz camping out with no wooden floors and no electric lights and he says every time you was not in bed you was standing in wet grass or in a mud puddle.

He says tents did not have windows and screen doors like we have today and that in rainy weather a soldier had to live like a mud turtle. He says he didn't see no wooden floors from the time he left home until the army got back from France. It is hard for me to believe this as this camp is a regular building project and there is almost as many carpenters here as soldiers. They shoed have all the buildings finished by the time the war is over, if they get good weather and don't walk so far for nails.

Army life is a big disappointment to me ma on account I always had an idea from the story books and pictures that most soldiers had saddle horses to ride. I ain't seen no horse since I got here. It is strictly a bunion derby army as I sed before. I wish army uniforms fitted better. What the army needs is more tailors. I got a hat that is big enough for a coat and a coat so tight I cud use it for a hat.

There is no glamour here like in the movies of army life. Almost everybody here needs a shave and haircut and this goes for the generals who are homely old pelicans and don't look nothing like the generals in pictures except Wally Berry.

The boys here tell me the training I am getting is good for me but I do not feel no better than when I started training even if I am in better shape like the doctors say. I wud rather be out of condishun in private life than a perfect speller.

men in the army. I sleep good but not for long on account of the rule that makes a soldier get up at day-break. (I never seen so many sunrises in my life.) Gee ma I am half through a day's training before you and the folks are out of bed back home. I wud be in better shape for a war if I cud sleep an hour longer.

If I wuz in a war I wud not squawk but what is the sense getting an army up so early when there is nothing to do but just what you done the day before witch cud be done better in brighter sunlite anyhow.

I am glad the winter is over. The first robin was seen in an army chicken pie here yesterday and four baby chicks hatched out of a half dozen eggs in the mess room last week. Spring can't cum to soon as I have had enuff outdoor life in cold weather and I do not care for it even if it does make Eskimos healthier.

Well, I must close now ma as I have got to go walking again in defense of my country. Cud you send me some more socks as my feet wear right through them the first 100 miles?

Love,

Oscar.

TIPS to Gardeners

CHOOSE BEANS WISELY

THE gardener should be well acquainted with the many available varieties of stringless beans, if he is to get the most from his bean crop.

If earliness is the principal interest, the gardener should select either Bountiful (green-podded) or Golden Wax (yellow). Bountiful is excellent for use when small, in shoe-string size. It is also a good choice for home canning, for it produces abundantly.

The gardener interested in yield over a long season should select both a bush bean, and a pole bean. The pole beans begin producing when the yield from the bush beans tapers off.

Kentucky Wonder is one of the best all-purpose pole beans. It provides good quality snap beans. When past the snap stage, the pods may be cut up, and cooked southern style. Later, this bean may be used in the green shell stage. In the more mature stage the beans may be used in baking or in soup.

Prophetic Author

Copenhagen's first bombproof shelter, built a short time ago, is on the site where Ludvig Holberg, the celebrated Scandinavian author, wrote his Epistolae in 1727. In it, says Collier's, Holbert predicted that if men should ever learn to fly they would swoop down upon and attempt to destroy great numbers of innocent people who, to save themselves, would have to take refuge in holes in the ground.

THE TRUTH SIMPLY TOLD

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions. These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes. If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed. Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!
